Moritz LL.M. Program

The Moritz LL.M. program is designed for foreign lawyers who wish to advance their legal education in a stimulating academic environment. The College offers the dual advantages of a highly-regarded law curriculum at a major U.S. university and a LL.M. program of limited size that allows for individualized attention and support.

“The Ohio State University has nearly 4000 international students and almost that many international faculty already on its campus.”

Program Goals

Two of the program's primary goals are to immerse foreign lawyers in a year of U.S. legal education and to foster interaction between American J.D. students and the LL.M. students. In large part this is accomplished by integrating the LL.M. students into the J.D. curriculum, ensuring that both groups will benefit from the interaction and graduate from their respective programs well prepared to participate in an increasingly globalized world.

Moritz also offers a rich selection of student activities outside the classroom where LL.M. students may participate in the life of the College.

Academic Information

The Moritz LL.M. is a one-year general program designed to provide foreign lawyers with a basic understanding of the United States legal system through a rigorous program of legal training by the College of Law faculty. Students are required to successfully complete 24 semester credits to earn the LL.M. degree.

The Moritz LL.M. program integrates foreign LL.M. students into J.D. classes, providing LL.M. students with more than 145 classes and seminars from which to craft the LL.M. that best suits their interests and career goals.

An LL.M. student may choose to pursue a truly general LL.M. that provides them with a broad understanding of the fundamentals of American law, electing to take courses in torts, contracts, constitutional law, etc. Alternatively, an LL.M. student may opt to complete the twelve credits necessary to fulfill the requirements for one of the six designated LL.M. concentrations such as Business Law, Criminal Law and Procedure, Dispute Resolution, Intellectual Property and Information Law, International Law or Labor and Employment Law.

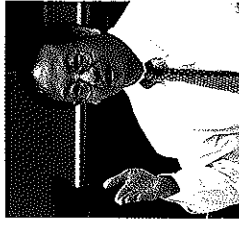

Regardless of the path chosen, LL.M. students will graduate from this program with new skills to further their career in their home country, as well as with the tools needed to function effectively in an increasingly global economy.

Admission Requirements

LL.M. program applicants are limited to students who have already:

- obtained an LL.B. or its equivalent from a foreign country;
- completed in a foreign country the university-based legal education required to take the equivalent of the bar examination in that foreign country;
- qualified to practice law in a foreign country; or
- the equivalent thereof as determined by the LL.M. Admissions Committee.

An applicant for whom English is a second language must present evidence of a Test of English as a Foreign Language (TOEFL) score of 600/100 or 7.5 IELTS.

There is an ongoing admission process, with a final application deadline of May 30th, but prospective students will increase their chances of admission by applying early.

Applicants for admission may apply by using an electronic application at

A Welcoming Community

The Ohio State University has nearly 4000 international students and almost that many international faculty already on its campus, with a well-established infrastructure to meet international student needs. We are located in Ohio's state capital of Columbus, where the cost of living is significantly lower than that of other major Midwestern cities, yet the diverse population lends the community a sophisticated, multicultural flavor. It's the best of both worlds: manageable lifestyle combined with art, culture and an intriguing social environment.
